

Charities Targeted for Life Insurance Programs

The lead article in our July/August 2004 issue is entitled “Flawed Life Insurance Programs Promoted to Charities.” The article describes the programs, often called “death pools,” explains how they are flawed and “too good to be true,” and discusses why they are likely to cause disappointment for the charities. Previously and subsequently we published a few other articles that are relevant for persons interested in this topic. Listed below are the dates of the issues and the titles of the articles.
